

Tolland, CT

The Savings Institute Bank & Trust challenged Solidus to design a full-service bank branch located on a piece of property surrounded by a critical aquifer in the town of Tolland. The exterior was a rural New England design featuring "six-over-six" windows, a high pitch roof, and a cupola.

The fully branded interior has three complete offices, a four-station interactive teller pod, a coupon booth, a tech bar, and a comfortable waiting area for clients. The main objective of the facility is to meet the clients' needs with a staff that actively participates in answering questions and solving client problems.

The branch is 1,462 square feet.
